Summer Camp 2011

30 June-7 July

Athens, Hellas

Location

Vouliagmeni is a seaside municipality 20 km south of Athens. It is bisected by a palm tree lined boulevard, Athinas Avenue, which arrives from Athens as Vouliagmenis Avenue, then runs parallel to the seashore and continues southwards. The area east of the main road is a rocky slope of a foothill of Mount Hymettus, and the bulk of the town is built there, along with the local elementary school, post office, banks and town hall.

The western half, located between Athinas Avenue and the sea, is covered with pine trees and consists of two peninsulas, Megalo and Mikro Kavouri ("Big Crab" and "Little Crab") that feature sandy and pebble beaches in between rocky shores, luxury hotels, the local high school, the picturesque chapel of "St. George of the crab", two marinas, a sports club (football, basketball, volleyball, tennis) and upscale restaurants, taverns and cafeterias on the waterfront.

The Mikro Kavouri is connected to the mainland with a narrow, sandy isthmus commonly referred to as "Laimos" (Lemós (λαιμός), i.e. the "Neck"), flanked by one public beach on one side and Ástir Palace beach on the other side.

The Vouliagmeni beaches are consistently awarded the coveted EU blue flags for environmental excellence.
